7. CITATION AND QUOTATION

Plagiarism

Plagiarism is the use of another author's ideas or words, illustration, tables etc. as if they were one's own. If this practice is revealed, the thesis will be rejected. In order to avoid plagiarism, you need to faithfully and accurately cite all your sources, including books, journals, handouts and unpublished manuscripts, as well as any other media, such as the Internet, letters or significant personal communication.

Citation and quotation

There are two ways to borrow and use someone's idea in your thesis:

(1) CITATION: when you express something in your own language then acknowledge the borrowing with a note or reference

(2) QUOTATION: in case you use verbatim quote in your thesis, or in other words, you quote someone's idea word for word, you need to enclose it in quotation marks and acknowledge your debt with a note/reference.

References in the text: adding notes in parentheses

It is not enough to list your references only at the end of your thesis, in the bibliography, but you are required to incorporate your references in the text by using parenthetical notes. A parenthetical note is a short reference enclosed in parentheses and incorporated without a number in the text of your paper. It refers in brief to a source already cited once in full; or to an item in your bibliography/reference list at the end of your paper. Parenthetical citations take the form of (Author Date). Note that 'Author' means the author's last name; 'Date' is the date of publication as listed in the bibliography of your paper. E.g.:

(B.Albert 1995,)

In case of two authors: The authors' last names (joined with 'and') and the year of publication in question must be put in brackets and separated with a comma:

(Müller and Fischer, 2010).

In case of more than two authors: The last name of the first author followed by 'et al' in italics and the year of the publication in question must be put into brackets and separated with a comma:

(Müller et al, 2010).

Bibliography

A bibliography is a list of works cited in your text. The references should include the name of the author, the title of the work, the editor, the date of publishing; in case of a journal the number of the volume and the page number has to be indicated as well. List works alphabetically according to the last name of the author. You can use maximum 50 references. It is highly recommended to use specialized software for this, like Reference Manager, or EndNote. This latter is free. Example for the format of the references:
